

arguments

1. An argument is a set of claims including a conclusion and one or more premises that are supposed to provide reasons for believing the conclusion to be true.
2. Sometimes, the conclusion is left unstated, but is clearly meant. This still counts as an argument.
3. Claims for which no premises are supplied might be true, but they are not arguments.