

assessing the credibility of a source

In general, the credibility of a source will correlate

- positively with how knowledgeable the source is
- positively with how important it is to the source to be right
- negatively with how important it is to the source to be believed